Population Report

on the Cities of Arkansas

The first comprehensive report on 1950 census figures for the cities of Arkansas appears in the July 14 news bulletin of the Arkansas Resources & Development Commission.

As previously reported by the Bureau of the Census, Arkansas as a whole lost 49,000 population from 1940 to 1950 — the new total being 1,900,338. This loss is attributed to wartime shifts in population throughout the nation.

But an even more pronounced shift took place within the state itself — the movement from the country into the cities. In 1940 Arkansas had only 22.2 per cent of its population living in towns, but today the town percentage is 32.4 — and the country population has dropped from 77.8 per cent to 67.6.

Hope's population gain was mediocre, showing 8,602 against 7,475 for a decade ago. Standout cities in our class were: West Memphis, which increased from 3,369 to 9,082; Malvern, 8,015 against 5,290; Forrest City, 7,557 against 5,690; and Paragould, 9,660 against 7,079.

Some of the college towns did very well but their gains were due to "bookkeeping figures" since the 1950 census for the first time counted college students as residents of the school town rather than the place where their parents live.

For instance: Arkadelphia rose from 5,078 to 6,795, aided by two colleges; Conway, also possessing two schools, went from 5,782 to 8,586; Russellville with one college, jumped from 5,927 to 8,135; and Magnolia, with a college and an oil boom, rose from 4,326 to 6,908.

Both Prescott and Nashville had good increases for the decade. Prescott gained from 3,177 to 3,958; and Nashville went from 2,782 to 3,528. But Stamps barely broke even, going from 2,405 to 2,525.

Camden landed in the 10,000-plus bracket, rising from 8,975 to 11,341; to which must be added the figures for Cullendale, its adjacent paper mill colony town. Cullendale rose from 821 to 2,981 — giving Camden a total city zone population of 14,322 — which puts it in the class of Jonesboro, 16,260, and Blytheville, 16,221.

The census figures are definitely rough on Hope, and all southwest Arkansas, for that matter.

It is obvious to any critical observer that we are going to have to employ more local capital in local enterprise if we expect to keep pace in the future with sister cities which definitely outgained us in the last decade. The only possible explanation for the growth of a city is that people find job opportunities, and move there. And if they don't find those opportunities they go somewhere else.

We have some industrial prospect around the corner right now — ventures in the former Proving Ground property here, and the paper mill scheduled for Prescott, which latter project will help all towns of the area as well as farmers and timber land owners.

That we need these is obvious. The 1940-1950 census report was the poorest in Hope's history.

Sgt. Downs, of Hope, in News From Korea

Correspondent William Moore in a dispatch from a frontline command post in Korea mentioned a local man, Sgt. James Downs, who is now serving with the American armed forces in that sector.

Sgt. Downs and a Sgt. Poland are reported to have "cautiously called directions for American mortar fire" in chasing the North Koreans off a couple of ridges Wednesday afternoon at the fighting front north of Taejon. Mr. Moore also observed a new air of relaxation and confidence among our men.

The Hope sergeant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Downs of 822 East Division. He is a native of this section of Arkansas. In World War II he served with the National Guards who were sent to Alaska. He also fought in the Battle of the Bulge in Belgium.

Mr. and Mrs. Downs have not heard from their sergeant son in quite some time. They have six other children, five sons and one daughter.

Many Attend Revival of Melon Festival

After a lapse of 20 years Hempstead folks got together yesterday at Patmos and revived the one-famous watermelon festival and is the plan now to continue the affair annually during the melon season.

Yesterday's festival might be called a "family affair." Thousands of Hempstead residents attended sometime during the day or night and a few from adjoining counties showed up.

Highlight of the days festivities was a watermelon feast at 3 p. m. This was preceded by coronation ceremonies in which Miss Sarah Jane Mc Mhee of Patmos was crowned queen of the festival. Miss Mc Mhee won out over 19 other contestants from all over Hempstead County.

The program lacked the splendor of a mile-long parade of floats which started off festivities in the old days but nevertheless the "get together" was enjoyed by all. Activities started at midmorning and continued into the night and included flag ceremonies, queen's contest, a watermelon feast, speaking by district, state, and county candidates and singing.

Throughout the day people came and went perhaps the largest crowd for Cullendale, its adjacent paper mill colony town. Cullendale rose from 821 to 2,981 — giving Camden a total city zone population of 14,322 — which puts it in the class of Jonesboro, 16,260, and Blytheville, 16,221.

Blacktopping of Park Drive Starts Friday

Blacktopping of Park Drive will start Friday morning, Mayor Lyle Brown announced today, indicating that the avenue and the main gate to Fair park will be blocked for a few days.

However, the north and south gates to the park will be open to the public. Gradually all streets north from Park Drive to Highway 67 will be paved.

Excessive Buying Foolish, Truman Tells Nation

Washington, July 20 — (AP) — President Truman said last night he is ready to order price control and rationing "if prices should rise unduly because of excessive buying and speculation."

He spoke sharply of both practices, saying that scarce buying is "foolish" and "selfish," and adding: "Every businessman, who is trying to profiteer in time of national danger — every person who is selfishly trying to get more than his neighbor — is doing just exactly the thing that any enemy of this country would want him to do."

The President reported to the nation on the Korean situation in a broadcast carried by all American radio and television networks, and beamed overseas by the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting corporation.

In acid language, he referred to the attack on South Korea as "an outright breach of the peace and a violation of the charter of the United Nations," and said it proves "beyond all doubt that the international Communist movement is willing to use armed invasion to conquer independent nations." He added:

"It was an act of raw aggression, without a shadow of justification. I repeat — it was an act of raw aggression."

Besides making clear his belief that "international communism" must bear responsibility for the Korean crisis, Mr. Truman had harsh words for Russia's attitude toward the affair.

Noting that Moscow had refused an American request that it use its influence with the North Koreans to halt the attack, the President said:

"The Soviet government has said many times that it wants peace in the world, but its attitude toward this act of aggression against the republic of Korea is in direct contradiction of its statements."

Mr. Truman pledged that the United States will stay in the battle, even though we know that it will take a hard, tough fight to halt the invasion and to drive the Communists back."

Airforce Downs 50 Red Planes in Two Days

Tokyo, July 20 — (AP) — Allied carrier and land-based planes caught the elusive North Korean air force in the open and destroyed at least 50 planes in two days.

The figure was reported today by the Far East air forces, which said the enemy's total war losses are 78. It added that Allied plane losses total 37, a big majority of them lost in operational accidents.

(Washington reported an even higher Red loss. The defense department said 60 North Korean planes were destroyed on Tuesday alone.)

Marine Reserve Units Called to Active Duty

Washington, July 20 — (AP) — Selected marine corps units around the country were notified last night they will be called to active duty within 10 days.

A marine corps spokesman who disclosed this said a statement on the call-up for extended duty may be issued later today.

He said the notifications were sent out a few hours after President Truman authorized the armed services to call reservists needed "to meet the situation in Korea."

Earlier Col. John Griebel, director of the third marine corps reserve district in New York had said all organized marine reserve units — including women — in the New York-New Jersey area had been alerted.

Arkansas Unit Gets Order

Little Rock, July 20 — (AP) — Arkansas' 15th U. S. marine corps infantry battalion was alerted today for full mobilization.

Maj. William Kennedy, Jr., commanding officer of the battalion, which headquarters in Little Rock, told a news conference that 335 men of his unit have been instructed to "be ready to move within 10 days" after an order for mobilization is received.

"This is a warning order," Kennedy said. "Units will be assigned to stations of initial deployment by separate directives to be issued by the marine corps. Movement to stations of initial deployment will commence within ten days after receipt of orders to active duty."

He added that administrative details will follow shortly.

St. Louis Marines Alerted

St. Louis, July 20 — (AP) — The Third infantry battalion, U. S. marine corps reserves, was put on an alert basis today for full mobilization, its commanding officer announced.

He said this means members of the unit must be prepared to report for duty within ten days after a mobilization date is set in Washington.

Asked whether this means mobilization of the unit is certain, Col. C. W. Stahl said he did not know. He added that if a date for mobilization is set, "we will have nine days after that to get our affairs in order and move."

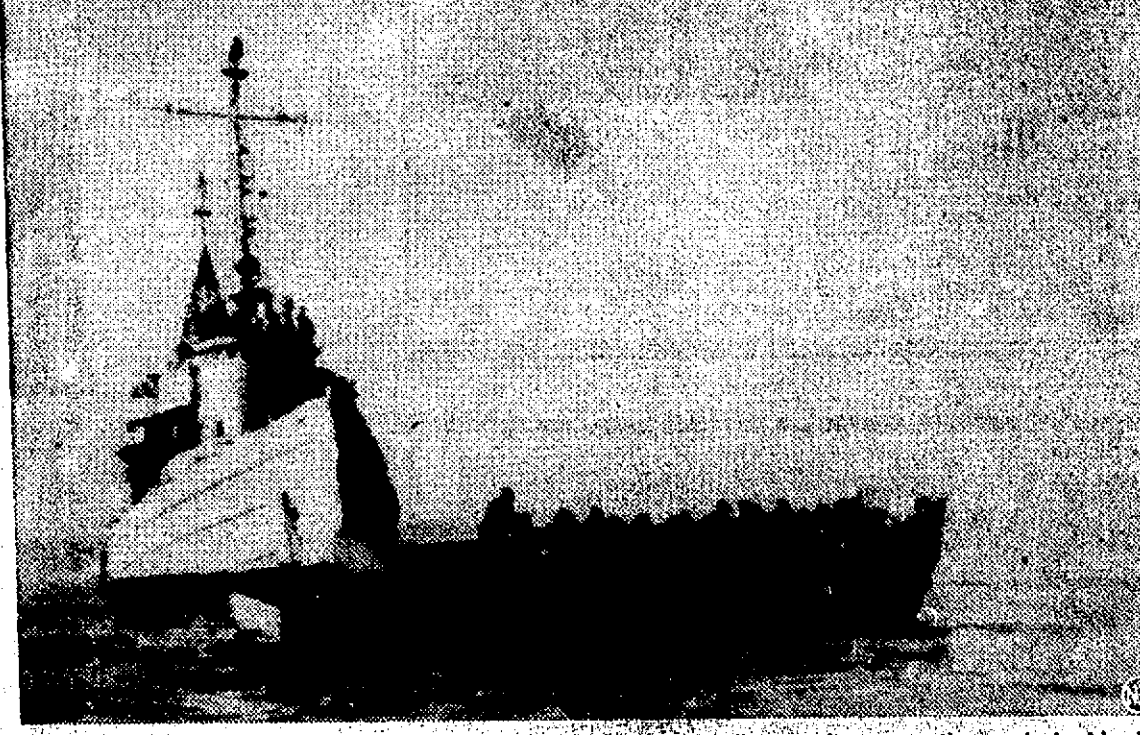

The battalion, activated after World War II, has more than 600 members, all living in the greater St. Louis area. This includes Alton, East Alton, Wood river, the tri-city area, and East St. Louis in Illinois as well as St. Louis and suburbs.

Forty per cent of the battalion members are veterans of World War II.

The unit has had four summer encampments and has been trained in amphibious warfare.

War Placed Squarely Up to Russia

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, July 20 — (AP) — President Truman's decision to rally American power against expanding Communist strength puts squarely up to Russia the decision on whether the world is to move toward all-out war or a new, uneasy peace.

Diplomatic authorities said the next move in the global crisis is clearly up to Moscow — now that the President has backed up his stop-aggression policy with initial preparation to fight where necessary.

Administration leaders remained hopeful that the men in the Kremlin would heed the President's warning and choose a peaceful course. They did not rule out, however, the possibility that the Communist chiefs have decided on war and may now unfold a policy to that end.

In any case, Russia has the initiative and the United States and Allied nations are confronted with the need to marshal maximum forces as rapidly as possible.

In terms of conventional weapons — armies, tanks, airplanes and the like — Russia is considered to have a wide margin of strength over the western powers. This might be one reason why the Red leaders would prefer a military showdown fairly soon.

On the other hand, official Washington is confident that the United States has an edge in atomic weapons and probably also in some other new devices, such as anti-tank weapons, which still have to be put into mass production. The atomic bomb may be a powerful influence against the Kremlin forcing the issue anytime soon.

Meanwhile the United States and its allies in the Atlantic pact are beginning the long, slow process of building up their military strength. Mr. Truman disclosed yesterday that talks already are under way with the other 11 Atlantic treaty members, on increasing weapons production, and he promised additional American help in this effort.

State and defense department officials estimate this may cost $5,000,000 on top of the $10,000,000 American armament program which Mr. Truman laid before congress in his message.

Reds Lost Chance Says MacArthur

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, July 20 — (AP) — Failure of the South Koreans to hold the Han river line south of Seoul resulted in the United States' "desperate decision" to commit American infantrymen piecemeal in the Korean war.

The gamble has paid off, General MacArthur said today. "The Koreans have lost their chance for victory."

When the invaders breached the wide and deep Han three weeks ago they had a clear road — and relatively little South Korean opposition — all the way to Pusan. Had they reached Pusan, the Communists would have controlled the whole peninsula and deprived a relief force of any suitable beachhead for pouring in supplies and men needed for a counterattack.

MacArthur told South Korean leaders at Suwon June 29 to defend the Han river at all costs to give him time. But the line broke within hours after the conferences.

It was decided then to pour U. S. infantrymen into Korea as quickly as possible by air and sea. This was contrary to all military practice.

These young, green kids, in the loneliness of a frontline position, first wavered, then began to hold. At great sacrifice they slowed the triumph Red race to a walk in the critical days when time was so pressing.

At the front, these young combat troops could get only a glimpse of the power being built up behind them. They could only hear rumors of the hammering, which Allied air power was delivering to the enemy deep in his own territory.

But air power did come to their direct aid. Bombers and fighters destroyed tanks, trucks and railroad equipment and strafed troop concentrations. Supply bases were dealt heavy blows that destroyed the enemy's needed fuel and ammunition.

Along the east coast, American and British naval forces, blocked any serious alternate threat to Pusan.

"We bought precious time," said MacArthur. In less than three weeks, three fully equipped divisions have landed, a vast pile of supplies has gone ashore and the navy and air force have been reinforced.

Two groups totaling 50 B-29s, transferred intact 8,000 miles, made their first successful mission eight days from the time they got their first orders in the United States. A complete amphibious landing was prepared and staged in 10 days.

This is the speed of planning and execution that MacArthur also praised.

As Reds Revive Push; Gen. Dean Is Missing

Tokyo, Friday, July 21 — (AP) — Front line dispatches said the 24th division was withdrawing from embattled Taejon and the whereabouts of its commander, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, was unknown.

A MacArthur communique issued at 12:30 a. m. today, daylight time (8:30 a. m. day, CST) said the Americans clung to their positions and a communique appeared to be on information that was not confirmed.

The communique said a Communist infantry tank was at the city. Field dispatches said it had driven into the city which was ablaze.

The Americans held off the attack for several hours. They used for the first time the new rocket launchers which they knocked out eight of the first Red tanks. The air force did not have destroyed five Red tanks in the battle.

General Dean was reported to have been killed in the front all day Thursday once with one of the launching teams. His name was not mentioned in the communique.

(In Washington the defense part said it had been reported Dean was missing.)

Oren Harris Speaks Here Tonight at 8

Bringing his campaign to a close in the final week, Congressman Oren Harris of the 7th District defended his record and spoke to his people in a grass-roots campaign throughout the District.

He speaks here tonight at 8 o'clock in the Livestock arena at Park.

Stressing the importance of the situation in Korea, he said week given most of his discussions on our efforts to prepare for the future, and the realistic conditions which we are now facing.

"Constantly," he declared, "Russia has prevented our efforts to maintain peace and their constant determination to aggress on free peoples of the world threatens another world war."

He said that the $14 billion direct to the military some $4 billion in relief aid direct to our national defense is being provided by the Congress and it is obviously necessary we must within the next few years provide a 1 billion dollar in our all-out effort to meet the Red Communist aggression in Korea. We had hoped this would not be a serious threat to our country but obviously the Red Communists have intended it to be and we must meet it with whatever force is necessary to stop it even if it means the use of the atomic bomb.

Our stability and security have depends on peace and a domestic program, he said, and my record has been to provide for an all-out effort to meet the Red Communist aggression in Korea. We had hoped this would not be a serious threat to our country but obviously the Red Communists have intended it to be and we must meet it with whatever force is necessary to stop it even if it means the use of the atomic bomb.

Public Reacts Favorably to Mr. Truman

By JACK BELL

Washington, July 20—(AP)—Lawmakers generally reacted favorably today to President Truman's appeal for emergency measures in the fight against communism.

Some congressmen advocated even further steps.

Republicans, however, balked at the economic controls Mr. Truman asked yesterday in his message to congress and the people.

With congress ready to expand military manpower and throw $10,000,000,000 more into arms production, GOP members made it clear they will oppose what Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, said he suspected was an effort to "nationalize the economy."

The $10,000,000,000 fund request brought the comment from Senator Russell (D-Ga.) that "it looks like a big war instead of a little one."

Rep. Halleck (R-Ind.) said congress won't give any "blank check" authority to the President but will "do what is necessary to guarantee our security and our binding commitments."

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) and Rep. Morton (R-Ky.) both called for enactment of excess profits taxes.

Rep. Aarons (R-Ill.) said he was happy the President didn't ask for price controls. It will be up to congress to determine if and when they are necessary, he said.

Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.) said he wished the President had asked for full mobilization of industry and manpower, adding that "this is not a piecemeal fight we are in."

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the GOP policy committee, called the administration's new defense production bill too broad in some of its terms.

He said the measure—setting up allocation and priorities powers, imposing credit and commodity speculation curbs and providing production loans—"goes far beyond any necessity we know of at the moment."

Rep. Wolcott (R-Mich.) top Republican on the house banking committee, predicted that if congress grants the President allocation powers, prices of consumer goods will shoot up "and in 30 days the President will be back here asking for price and wage controls."

The defense production bill carries no mention of price control and would specifically ban rationing at the retail level.

But Taft said a speedy examination indicates "it would give the President every power he had during the war, except price control and rationing, and would add some new powers," Wolcott agreed.

An army spokesman said Thursday night that about half the American units around Taejon had succeeded in making a fairly orderly withdrawal. The Americans again had to fight against appalling odds.

Fighting was fierce around fuel dumps which the Reds tried to reach quickly. The new king-size rockets stopped three Red tanks dead near these dumps.

Battle reports said the Reds made use of a skein of small roads west of American defenses to bring many of their tanks toward the city from the southwest.

An Eighth army spokesman in Korea said North Korean forces of unknown strength were reported in Chongju early Thursday in a drive down the western side of the Korean peninsula. U. S. plane attacked Chongju and Kumsu, indicating that Kumsu also was in Red hands.

The Chongju-Kumsu area is about 40 air miles southwest of Taejon.

Earlier, about mid-day, General MacArthur said the invaders had lost their "one great chance for victory"—by failing to knock out South Korea before American forces blunted their drive. "Our hold upon the southern part of Korea represents a secure base. We are there to stay," he declared.

But he conceded there might be some withdrawals before the United Nations' forces launched a counter-offensive.

Allied warplanes caught the North Korean air force crawling

Airforce

The remainder were caught aground.

Most of these kills were made by rocket and machinegun fire from jets flying at tree-top level on airfields near Pyongyang, about 25 miles north of the 38th parallel. Land-based jets have hit North Korea before, but not frequently. They use extra tanks for the long flight from Japan.

Carrier planes, including F9F Panther jets, hit the Wonsan refinery area on the East coast. They set it afire Tuesday and the smoke could be seen 60 miles at sea. The refinery still was burning Wednesday when the planes returned. This time they set a chemical plant on fire, blasted rail yards and trains and damaged a power station.

They also struck the main Red airbase at Yonko, up the East coast from Wonsan, Wednesday, and knocked out nine locomotives. While navy planes blasted the Eastern Red coast industrial area, land-based F-80 jets destroyed 15 planes on the ground near Pyongyang, the Red capital.

back onto air-fields long vacant. In the past two days they destroyed 47 Red planes on the ground and three in the air. The toll may be higher.

The Red drive on Taejon was the first attack in force from their dearly-won ground south of the Kum river.

Lt. John P. McCann, Jacksonville, Fla., a Mustang pilot, said Taejon was "burning away like mad" at 4:45 p. m. Thursday (1:45 a. m. EST).

McCann and Lt. Duane Biteman of Seattle each dropped two 500 pound fire bombs on a tank.

Field dispatches said the first seven Red tanks rumbling toward Taejon were picked off one after another by new ground-fired rockets. The 3.5-inchers are a recoilless weapon brought into action for the first time.

Later, an eighth enemy tank was reported knocked out.

There was no indication how many tanks the invaders had got across the Kum.

But at least four more rolled on Taejon. Four American jet planes wrecked two of these with rockets and drove the others to cover. American artillery and planes concentrated fire on them.

Pilots reported four big fires burning in Taejon shortly after noon. They apparently were caused by phosphorous shells lobbed into the city. Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson said some Red artillery appeared to be southwest of Taejon. This would mean the Reds have cut deep on the West flank.

As the Reds lashed at Taejon, two reinforcing American divisions—the first cavalry (infantry) and the 25th Infantry—moved into position for expected new Red pushes toward the southeast tip of Korea.

Mrs. Jamie Boyett Honored at Tea

At a beautifully appointed tea from 3 to 5 p. m. Wednesday a recent bride, Mrs. Jamie Boyett, was complimented by Mrs. W. I. Stroud, Mrs. Herbert Pinegar, and Mrs. Melton Frazier of Washington in the Stroud home on South Bonner Street.

Greeting guests at the door of the lovely Stroud home was Mrs. Max Walker, sister of the bride, from Columbus. She also introduced them to the receiving line which included Mrs. Stroud, Mrs. Pinegar, Mrs. Frazier, the honoree, and Mrs. Robert Levis, Sr. of Washington, mother of the bride.

The spacious living room was lovely with an arrangement of red roses in a crystal bowl on the coffee table. The mantel was centered with a graceful arrangement of rose colored zinnias and on each side were rose crystal vases, which were reflected in the large overhanging mirror.

Mrs. Clyde Sexton invited guests into the dining room. The bride's table was covered with an imported Maderia cutwork cloth and was centered with a beautiful arrangement of golden glows, shasta daisies and baby breath in a low Foster bowl placed on a reflector. Further carrying out the yellow and white color scheme were the yellow tapers in three branched silver candelabra which lighted the table. All table appointments were of silver and crystal.

Mrs. Joe Wilson, sister of the bride from Columbus, and Mrs. Robert Levis, sister-in-law of the bride, of this city, presided at the punch bowl and served the iced fruit punch with an orange and lemon base.

Mrs. Tom Ridgill of Little Rock served the dainty white iced cakes. Assisting in the dining room were Misses Sara June Etter, Margaret Nell Watkins, Frances Frazier, and Carolyn Locke.

The gift book in the gift room was presided over by Mrs. William Gardner, sister of the bridegroom. Assisting in the gift room was Miss Margaret James of Washington. An arrangement of golden glows and green leaves in a crystal bowl centered a chest of drawers and on each side were prisms crystal hurricane lamps. On a gift table was a lovely brass lamp filled with ivy.

The hostesses presented Mrs. Boyett with a corsage of pink roses and baby breath and gifts of silver in her chosen pattern.

During the appointed hours, fifty guests called.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved by Mrs. Carlton Samuels, secretary. The roll call was answered by each member telling "What Flowers I Grow Best."

Mrs. A. A. Halbert of Hope gave an interesting and helpful talk on "Horticulture." Mrs. Halbert also directed a contest on: "How well you know your trees." Mrs. Richard Arnold won the prize.

The best flower arrangement was won by Mrs. Elston Willis. The hostesses served cookies and punch to 10 members and the following guests, Mrs. William Cummins and children of Mexico, Mrs. W. R.

Printers Strike at Texarkana, El Dorado

Texarkana, Tex., July 20 — (AP)— Union printers employed by two newspapers here and two newspapers in El Dorado, Ark., struck this morning and set up pickets.

C. E. Palmer, publisher of the Texarkana Gazette and News and the El Dorado News and Times, said that the strike wouldn't interfere with normal publication in either city.

He said that non-union printers were working in composing rooms of both papers and that a photo-

Question Is: How Long Will It Last?

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, July 20 — (AP)— Now the $64 question is: How long will these preparations against war last?

The country is now being on a kind of war footing. Not full-scale — at least, not yet. But still on a scale that leaves behind the fat and happy luxury of the past five peacetime years.

The armed forces will be built up. No one yet has said how big they will have to be. This means many men drawn away from their peacetime jobs to serve in the army, navy or air force.

With the government about to control the use of steel and some other things which industry has been turning out, there'll be fewer things like autos, radios, TV sets, refrigerators.

Steel and a lot of other things will have to be turned into instruments of war like tanks, guns, planes. All of this will cost money. It will cost a lot more than the government has been spending. Even in these past luxurious years the government has been spending more than it's been collecting in taxes.

As a result, the government has been running in the red. It will go deeper in the red now for, as a starter and only as a starter, President Truman told congress yesterday he wants $10 billion more to spend.

Somebody has to pay for all this to keep the government from being ruined altogether by its big bills. Still no one will suffer any engraving process was being used to augment regular printing methods.

Palmer said the International Typographical union was demanding union jurisdiction and union membership of women who perforate tape for setting type. The tape is run through type-setting machines.

The union also seeks wage increases and other concessions.

Palmer said printers in his Hot Springs papers, the New Era and Sentinel Record, declined to join the walkout.

hardship except the men whose peacetime lives will be disrupted by military service.

Maybe, if we're very lucky and things don't get worse in the world, what has been outlined here is all that will have to be done. If it gets much worse, we'll go on a full wartime footing.

But suppose we're lucky. Suppose somehow a world war is avoided. How long will we have to stay on this semi-wartime footing? Months? Years?

Apparently, it will be years. That answer seems clear enough when you read what Mr. Truman told congress — remembering that what he said was based on the information of his advisers, civil and military.

"We must recognize that it will be necessary for a number of years to support continuing defense expenditures, including assistance to other nations, at a higher level than we had previously planned."

"Therefore, the economic measures we take now must be planned and used in such a manner as to develop and maintain our economic strength for the long run as well as the short run."

Those continuing defense expenditures for a number of years "at a higher level than we had previously planned," mean higher expenses than we have now — and therefore, it seems clear, higher taxes for years.

The controls Mr. Truman asked congress for are far less than he could have asked.

In one field he definitely is taking a chance: He didn't ask for power to ration or control prices. He didn't ask it because, as he made plain, he's depending on Americans' good sense not to ruin the economy by hoarding or price-raising.

Already there's plenty of evidence that a lot of Americans have been going wild, buying unnecessarily all over the country, and that some business men have been taking advantage of this to boost prices.

If Americans don't show good sense in the economic field, Mr. Truman said, rationing and price control will follow. But if that becomes necessary, the economy al-

What would happen to Arkansas' industry, resources and economic stability should the Korean war touch off the powder keg?

At least three officials predict great possibilities for Arkansas but one of them thinks that another era of booming war industries might endanger the state's future. He is Charles R. Senate Moves to Back Up the President

Washington, July 20 — (AP) — Senate today moved to give President Truman authority to expand the nation's fighting forces.

Meanwhile, the armed forces took a step of their own to build up strength by announcing that they are calling back a limited number of reservists for active duty.

A poll of the senate armed services committee indicated quick approval, probably before nightfall, for:

1. The removal of present top limits on the manpower of the armed services.

2. Presidential authority to "freeze" enlisted personnel in all of the services for 12 months beyond the periods they agreed to serve.

In advance of the committee's meeting, Chairman Tydings (D-Md.) told a reporter he hoped to get a speedy okay on both measures. The house armed services committee set a meeting on the same subjects for tomorrow.

Congressional leaders said they expect the next move to be a request to extend the present draft age limits — possibly up to 35 years. At present youths from 18 through 25 years must register while those from 19 through 25 years are subject to call.

Mrs. Truman asked removal of the present 2,005,882-man ceiling on military strength yesterday in his special message to congress saying the nation needed to build up its fighting forces in Korea and elsewhere. Chairman Tydings and Vinson (D-Ga.) of the senate and house armed services committees later introduced identical bills that would allow retention of all enlisted personnel for an additional 12 months.

Washington, July 20 —(AP)— President Truman called part of the cabinet and his mobilization chief to a White House conference today for a close look at how his new military program will affect the home front.

Those asked to sit in on the review were W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the national security resources board, the top mobilization agency Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, Secretary of the Interior Chapman, and Secretary of Labor Tobin.

President's Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters the talks will be concerned with Mr. Truman's recommendations to congress yesterday dealing primarily with the home front. These include things like consumer credit curbs, priorities and allocations for materials needed for military supplies and speeding up defense production.

Ross said telegrams received so far in reaction to Mr. Truman's message to congress and speech to the people last night on the Korean crisis and world conditions are "overwhelming in support of the President's position."

He said the wires are just beginning to come in, he has n't checked them carefully, but the favorable ones far outnumber the others.

Short of price ceilings, rationing and job controls, the President's Korean program calls for nearly every basic home-front power that was used to win World War II.

The immediate impact on consumers would be slight unless prices skyrocket. If they do, President Truman's message to congress said yesterday, he will "not hesitate" to call for price controls and ration books.

Otherwise, the control of easy-payment credit and the tightening of mortgage credit in home financing — both of them anti-inflation measures — were the chief hobbles on the consumer at this state.

Business got some bigger shocks. Besides carrying full power to ration materials — and thus regulate civilian good production — the proposed legislation evidently would let the government build and run steel mills and such other new plants as are needed for defense.

A call for higher taxes, on both wage-earners and businesses, is in the works, Mr. Truman said. He hinted at a boost in income taxes and, for corporations, an excess profits tax.

First Cavalry Lands Without Opposition

By O. H. P. KING

An American Beachhead in South Korea, July 19 — (AP) — The First Cavalry division, safely ashore after Tuesday's unopposed landing, will be able to fight as an independent army.

This was reported today by Rear Adm. James H. Doyle, who commanded the first U. S. amphibious operation of the Korean campaign.

Doyle said a landing of this sort usually requires three months of planning. Because of the need for speed, this one took only 10 days.

No enemy opposition has been encountered although American troops have made deep penetrations into the countryside. There were American troops in this area before the amphibious landing, however.

The number of troops which have been sent ashore is a military secret. But thousands have arrived to bolster the American and South Korean defense against Communist forces, now apparently building up strength for a renewed push southward.

The first cavalry landed with all its equipment. This means all the conventional weapons including artillery and engineering equipment like bulldozers.

A vast amount of supplies and materials has been put ashore. Snubnosed landing craft and wading amphibious "ducks" worked in relays to transport the supplies needed by the troops from transports anchored offshore.

Doyle told correspondents all troops, all vehicles and all essential supplies except reserves which were not needed for some time — were put ashore within 12 hours.

"I have the greatest feeling of satisfaction of the rapidity of progress," he said. "I've never seen it done so fast before. Everybody worked like dogs."

"A perfectly magnificent job was done by the troops. Although they were told only the barest essentials, they came through and certainly made a warning glow inside of me."

Twenty news correspondents, two radio men and six photographers accompanied the convoy. Several left when it became obvious there would be no immediate contact with the enemy.

Some newsmen had expected the troops to land farther north in a move cut the North Korean army from its base of supplies.

Local, state and federal governments pay more than 90 per cent of the costs of elementary and secondary schools in the United States and more than two thirds of the costs of higher education.

New Mexico, the couple will be at home at 1009 North Stanton street, El Paso, Texas.

LITTLE DOC informed Brownie on the trail back to Wolf Point that he had a professional call to make. They swung off the trail toward the Rocking R, where the boy was sick with scarlet fever.

They halted at the ranch house and dismounted. Then Doc said to his companion:

"I'll take about half an hour, maybe longer. See if you can find a razor in the bunk house. Clean up the best you can and then we'll ride back to town."

The boy was somewhat improved and Little Doc left some medicine with his mother and told her he would ride back the next day. Barring complications, which reasonable care could prevent, the lad would soon recover.

Brownie had shaved off his beard and looked less like a horse thief when he emerged from the bunk house to find Doc waiting for his horse. They rode to town and stopped at the Whitehouse.

Kit opened the door. She was white-faced and her shaky laugh had a sob underneath.

"Oh, Doc! I'm so glad you're back!" She clasped his arm as she reached his side. "Old Dad woke up this morning and saw Long Andy taking you away blindfolded. He came over and told me you were kidnapped and I woke up Butch Bell. He organized a posse—did you see them anywhere?"

Doc shook his head. "I must have missed the posse when I rode over to the Rocking R to see the sick boy," he said. "I did ride off this morning with Long Andy, but he was just—cautious, you might say."

DOC flexed his limbs, stiff after his long ride. Then he jerked loose the saddle strings that held his bag.

"Kit, this is Mr. Brown, a friend of mine I met on the train. Mr. Brown, this is Kit, my nurse."

Kit and Brownie acknowledged the introduction and then Kit called to a man who was passing to send over the barn man. After that, she led Little Doc and Brownie into the house.

She spoke in a low tone: "Dusty got back to town an hour ago. He didn't come to see me, but Old Dad brought the news. Old Dad said Dusty came in town to have a bench warrant sworn out for Long Andy's arrest for stealing some of his horses. Then, when Old Dad told him Long Andy had a gun in your back when you rode away, Dusty saddled a fresh horse and took Toad with him."

"Toad?"

Kit nodded. "Goodness knows what Toad has told him about us that night. I'm glad you didn't see Dusty."

Little Doc looked at Kit for a long moment. There were tears in her eyes now. A slow smile spread across his face, that was drawn and gray with utter weariness.

Little Doc spoke softly:

"You love Dusty Rhodes, don't you, Kit?" He did not wait for her reply. The slow flush creeping across her face was reply enough for Little Doc. "I've a notion you just found it out. That's the way it goes. You just get a nurse broken in so she knows the difference between a hypodermic needle and a stethoscope and she ups and gets married."

"You—you're—you're not hurt, are you John?"

Old Dad, the shepherd, opened the back door and entered. "I've changed my mind about going back to sheepherding," he said.

"What's the matter, Dad?" Doc asked. "Can't you take it?"

"I can take it all right," Dad said. "That ain't the reason. I just been figuring. You need a man around to do the chores and tend things. Little Doc, the next feller that comes ridin' up of a night will find me ready for him with a sawed-off double-barreled shotgun loaded right up to the muzzle with buckshot. Ain't nobody going to lay a hand on Little Doc while me and Shep's around!"

DOROTHY DIX

Money and Marriage

Dear Miss Dix: Will you please settle this argument between an engaged couple. The man maintains that they should pool their savings in order to defray all expenses of the honeymoon and setting up their new home, the balance to be deposited in a bank under a joint account. The girl contends that she should only buy household necessities, such as linens, lamps, dishes, etc., the balance of her money to be left in her own personal account. The man contends that inasmuch as he pays all expense for pleasure and entertainment he should be reimbursed by his future wife and have her donate her life's savings to the Great Cause. His expenses before marriage amount to far more than the woman's. He pays for the furniture, which costs more than the linens, etc. The girl asserts that she will not divulge the amount of her savings to her husband and will keep it in her personal account.

Johnson Gives Breakdown on Guards

Washington, July 19 —(AP)—The national guard and armed services reserves include about 2,500,000 men subject to call under power given to Secretary of Defense Johnson by President Truman.

However, only a small part of that number are fully trained and equipped, or even organized into units.

Here is how the backlog of military strength is made up:

National Guard
A total strength (a few weeks before the Korean war) of about 328,000 in ground units.

Organized into 27 divisions — 25 infantry, two armored.

All these divisions, says the army, are fully organized by units, ready to go. However, the main strength of almost all of the divisions is barely half the wartime complement.

Air National Guard
About 45,000 men 518 units composed into 12 light bomber and 72 fighter squadrons.

Army Reserves
About 600,000 men. However, only about 185,000 of these (70,000 officers and 115,000 men) are on a paid, regularly trained basis.

On paper the reserves consist of 17 infantry, three armored, five airborne divisions. But the degree of organization and actual readiness generally is much less than that for the guard.

ities, such as linens, lamps, dishes, etc., the balance of her money to be left in her own personal account. The man contends that inasmuch as he pays all expense for pleasure and entertainment he should be reimbursed by his future wife and have her donate her life's savings to the Great Cause. His expenses before marriage amount to far more than the woman's. He pays for the furniture, which costs more than the linens, etc. The girl asserts that she will not divulge the amount of her savings to her husband and will keep it in her personal account.

X. Y. Z.
Answer: Is this the attitude of modern young people toward marriage? I'm asking you. For frankly it makes a sentimental old-timer, such as I am, shudder.

Can't be Much in Love
It does not seem to me that a couple can be very much in love who haggle over who-should-pay-for-what in setting up their first home. Nor that they have any faith in each other if neither one can trust the other to do the generous thing. I should say that they are thinking more of their pocketbooks than they are of their hearts and that there was small chance of happiness for a husband and wife who are trying to drive hard bargains with each other and each striving to get the best of the transaction.

But, of course, if you feel that finance cuts more figure than romance in marriage, then you are very wise to settle the money problem before you get married. Furnishing the house has always been the man's responsibility as he is supposed to be the head of it, and the common usage is for the bride to supply only the household linens and such small articles as she chooses. But this presupposes the old-fashioned marriage in which the lovebirds were more concerned in building their nests than they were in holding out on each other.

As a general thing, a joint checking account is a good way for a husband and wife to keep their money, but perhaps each one of you had better hold on to your own if you believe your prospective husband or wife to be capable of grafting.

Dear Miss Dix: My sister-in-law and I are having a dispute as to who should take care of an old father and mother who are not capable of taking care of themselves. There are five children in the family, two sons and three daughters, all married and all the husbands working. Please give us your point of view.

ANSWER:
The five children should take care of their old parents in rotation. Each should do his or her share. It is just as much the duty of one child as it is of the other.

I do not think that anything is more contemptible and meaner than the way in which some children duck all of their responsibility toward their old fathers and mothers and pass the buck to some sister or brother. Yet you see this happen every day, and Father and Mother are wished off on some son or daughter while the others wash their hands of them.

Now nearly all old people are trying to live with. They are cranky. They have peculiar little ways. They are bossy and critical. They tell the same stories over and over again. They interfere in the way you raise the children, and how you run your house. This gets on the stoutest nerves if you have it day in and day out, year after year.

But those who are unwilling to do their duty toward their old parents may well remember that before many years they also will be old, and will be knocking at their children's door. And they will not wish their children to begrudge them a place by the fire and a seat at their tables.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Should we as a nation have a uniform marriage law and divorce?

I think so. It seems incredible that in a country as civilized and intelligent as ours that we should have a crazy patchwork of laws that makes it possible for people to be legally married in one state and bigamists in another and that makes their children legitimate in one place and illegitimate in another.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, over-exertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complaint of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Probe of K. C. Crime Is Started

Kansas City, July 19 —(AP)—The Kefauver senate committee, plunged today into a study of crime conditions in President Truman's home county. It calls as its first witness a former police commissioner, who was removed from office by Governor Forest Smith after the slaying of Northside Democratic Leader Charles Binaggio.

R. Robert Cohn, the former police commissioner, was called to testify behind closed doors after Senator Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) had told state political leaders and Kansas City gambling figures that his committee would neither persecute nor whitewash anyone.

He explained that all testimony taken at the two-day hearing would be in executive session but that the committee would hold open hearings here later, the date still to be decided.

Because of the closed door hearing the purpose of questioning Cohn could not be immediately learned but it was recalled the former police commissioner has said he told Governor Smith of a bribe offer made him by Binaggio to "open up a few joints" in Kansas City. Binaggio supported Smith for governor.

Kefauver, the only member of the committee to make the trip here, explained the purpose of the investigation was to determine whether crime syndicates are operating to the detriment of the nation and exerting evil influence on government.

Among those waiting was John Hendrup, chairman of the Democratic state committee, who said he was prepared to co-operate in any way possible with Senator Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) in his two-day hearing here which began this morning behind closed doors.

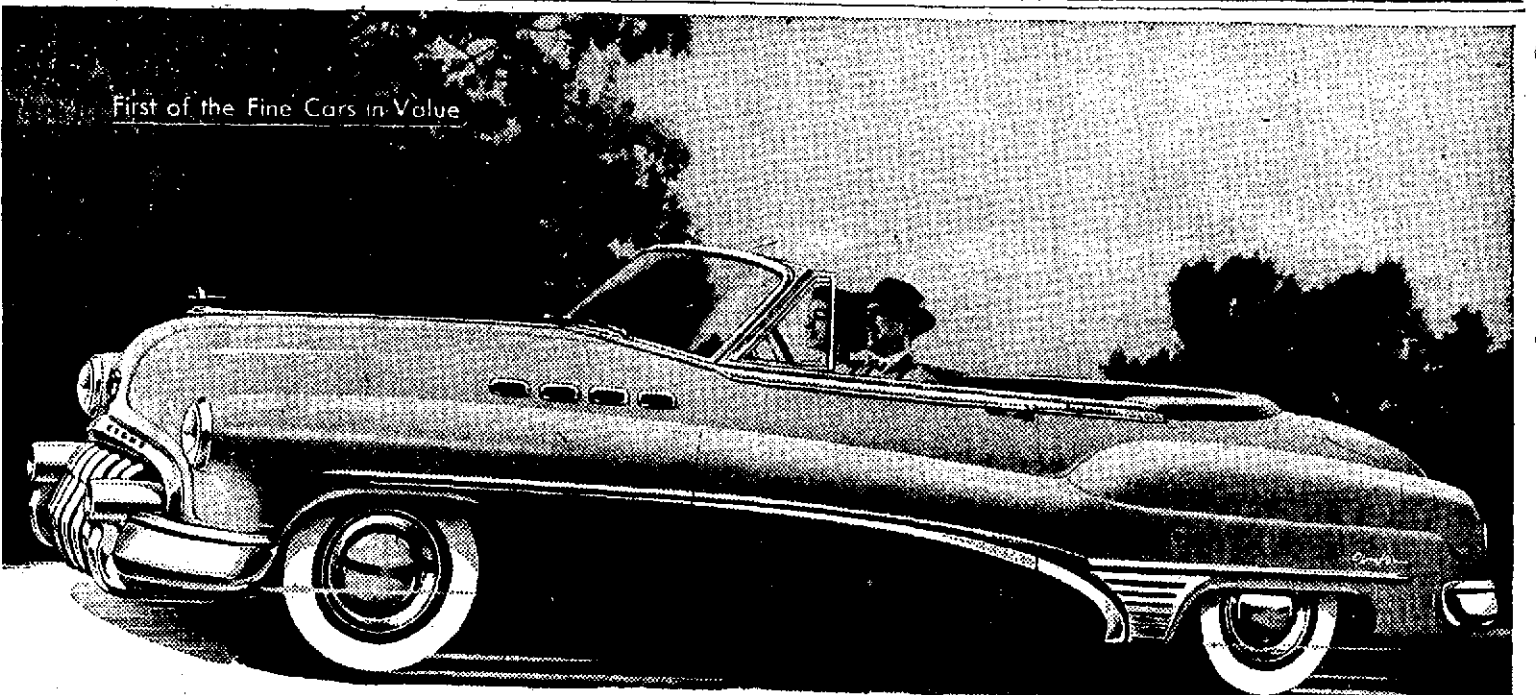

committee with an inquisition which seems to me a violation of a basic American right; and the right to argue, to persuade one's fellow Americans to join in a protest against the trend toward excessive interference of the state in the affairs of the citizen.

"The ostensible purpose is to investigate expenditures relating to any attempt to influence directly or indirectly the passage or defeat of any federal legislation."

"That wording might include hundreds of pieces which I have written. I am exercising my right as a citizen to communicate an opinion to others and to ask them to join with me in opposing the encroachments of big government upon our individual liberties."

Father Gillis said he might be regarded as a lobbyist because he had recently commended a book of facts, figures and arguments crying out that our government was following the road which Great Britain is treading to its ruin.

Yet this committee for constitutional government has been vilified in the most abusive language and Dr. Edward A. Rumeley, its executive secretary, has been branded a "hate-monger" by radio and in print by a notorious professional hate-monger. I confess that I have had no opportunity to read this committee's literature but I am sure that Father James M. Gillis is not so naive as to have been deceived nor so evil as to endorse any message inciting men to hate their fellow man,
